Be sure to buy the complete version of Photoshop (version CS4 or above). You need the complete version to use all the effects and features that Photoshop offers.

For example, if you only have Photoshop Elements (version 8), you can't change your photos to make them brighter or change the color of your photo. Photoshop's depth of features and the complexity of its programs can be overwhelming. Take time to learn Photoshop's various features and focus on mastering one or two techniques before attempting to master the tool. Mastering Photoshop takes a lot of practice and patience, especially if you're a beginner, because it's so easy to accidentally make something worse. Photoshop Elements With more than a million users, Photoshop Elements (version 8 or above) is the video editing and graphics editing system for people who want a simple, easy-to-use tool for image manipulation. Photoshop Elements is a version of Photoshop for people who use a small or portable computer. Elements includes four of Photoshop's features:

- Magic wand tool. For finding and selecting objects in images.
- Smudge tool. For warping an object.
- Healing brush. For repairing common image problems.
- Clone Stamp. For cloning objects to repair or cover up unwanted objects.

The following sections provide more information on how to use Photoshop Elements. Finding more ways to put yourself into your images Photoshop Elements has all the features that make Photoshop such a versatile editing tool. You can warp, blur, and drag your picture to enhance it. Your basic editing tools are as follows:

- warp
- blur
- rotate, flip, and zoom

You also have a selection tool to find and highlight objects in images. And you can add a variety of borders and frames to add structure and create a professional-looking image. Figure 3-3 shows how to warp and blur a photo. The steps in the figures are shown in the order in which you should perform them. Photoshop Elements 8 also has controls that give you more control over the effects of a filter. For example, a fashion filter (such as a hair, color, or skin filter) gives you more control over how you want your image to appear. Visit the Adobe website to find free downloads that contain tutorials on how to work with Photoshop Elements. Photoshop is a great tool for enhancing photos. Q: Force Server Side Validations in ASP.NET MVC 3 Is there any way we can force server side validations in ASP.NET MVC. We have validation logic that is already in the model and it is quite different from what is being validated in client-side. The problem is some of the validation logic(in the model) is not effective as there are chances of receiving form. Actually we have been forced to use the client-side validations as they are effective when user tries to post form without any errors in the client-side. We were thinking about putting the client-side validation logic in the business-logic layer(as the business rules are already known), and we have some other logic which is different from that being validated in client-side, so its not sensible to duplicate the same validation logic in the business-logic layer as well. But, is there any way we can force the validations done in server-side as well?

A: Typically, the purpose of validations is to catch problems that were done during the form submission. Validation logic for this is done by the client (browser) because: The server isn't trusted to do it. The web application should only have to verify the data that was provided in the request. The server should not worry about validating the data before it is provided to the client and it certainly shouldn't validate data in response to a request by the client. The server might change the data in response to an invalid request from the client, which invalidates the current state. If you do this, and you need to catch invalid data in order to fail fast, you're pretty much out of luck, because with invalid data, the server might not throw an exception, it might silently "correct" the data, and you'd need to implement some mechanism for detecting this. But if you try to actually validate the data in the server, that's trying to do too much work, it's going to slow things down, and it's probably going to fail. The server might respond to an invalid request with a custom error message and try to contact the client to give them more information on why they've done something wrong. If you try to validate the data before the server responds, you're going to need to catch errors on the client side. That doesn't make sense, because you're sending data to

Q: Wrap Inline Edit Text I am currently developing a Windows Phone 8 Application. And I have a question about using an Inline EditText. My Main Layout is a StackPanel with a Grid Row and Column, with some TextBoxes and other elements. My main problem is that there must be an option to wrap the inline EditText, at the moment they always appear in a single line. How can i achieve that each inline EditText has it's own line? I have no idea what Layout to use, as I saw some element should be a Grid and Layout for each textbox has this GridRow and GridColumn. There are some ways to do it, but I only want the simplest and easiest way to do it, for my beginner level, if you have an advice on what Layout to use or what will be the easiest approach it will be a great help. Thanks in advance.

A: You can use a WrapPanel and use the HorizontalContentAlignment and VerticalContentAlignment properties of a WrapPanel. Also the Foreground property of a TextBlock works in a similar way to getting the same for a InlineEditBox: In this case the Foreground is green so only one TextBox will show at a time but you can use the same logic to make any colour.

Q: changing the selected value of dropdownlist I have some functions where the customer clicks on the button and it brings up a dropdownbox of Teams which contains the questions. I've got a hidden field to save the id which corresponds to what the customer clicked on so I can then retrieve the teams and create a save team. However what I can't get to work is changing the selected value of the dropdownlist using jquery. How can I go about doing this? I'm going to have other dropdownlists where the customer clicks on the buttons and it brings up a gridview which is generated from a stored procedure.
