Read the full Fifa 22 For Windows 10 Crack coverage at FIFA.com “We looked at the success of the last couple of games in terms of balancing, we focused on what was successful or what we felt should be changed,” Kitichi Yoshida, Technical Director of FIFA 23 to Video Gaming Magazine. “We used data to improve the game, to see the mistakes we made in the past. “Some of the things that maybe we’re doing better [now] are related to technology, or using data, and in some ways it’s very simple.” Kitichi Yoshida EA Sports/Yoshida Over the past 10 years, sports video games have become bigger and bigger with more features. But when we look at players more closely, a lot of things are happening on the pitch. FIFA 22 introduced a new artificial intelligence (AI) system that governs the actions of all 22 players in a way that makes them dynamic, intelligent and unpredictable. “You have chemistry,” Yoshida explains. “What we’re getting back from FIFA 1, 2, 3 or 4 is that players on those platforms are more realistic. But when we look at players from the athletes we have [now], they’re very unpredictable, they’re emotional. “We’ve been able to design a system in terms of behaviour of players, creating AI for them. When they try to change the game, they try to get the ball, they try to defend better and have the right technique. Not only, they try to receive the ball, but they try to make the right decisions. “We’ve tried to implement that in a proper way. I think we’ve been able to push our video games much further in terms of behaviour, intent. It’s a time of change in the way we’re doing games, in terms of how we’re developing games.” Kitichi Yoshida EA Sports/Yoshida However, FIFA 22 also seeks to enhance the experience of players who wish to play the game without having to worry about the AI, with a new “Player Skills” feature. Using full motion capture data, it uses player and team psychological profiles to analyse a player’s style and set up encounters with certain opponents. “A very good example of this is Cristiano Ronaldo,💎
